In comic issue 15 of the homonymous monthly series of the hero, the Joker convinces the villain known as Riddler to help him with his misdeeds, all this after releasing him from Arkham Asylum.[8] Snyder commented: "As part of the villain's original plan to want Batman to be stronger and more unstoppable, he decides to look for the only other villain he considers a real threat to Batman, which will force him to improve if he wants to face both".[8] They also anticipated that the end of the saga would be set at the Arkham Asylum and that it would be starred exclusively by Batman and the Joker.[8] For the Snyder saga, it was based on the character's appearances during the time Grant Morrison wrote. The Batman series, under Morrison's command, the character was characterized by being extremely violent.[9] During an interview prior to the launch of the series, Snyder commented to promote the play: "There is a reason why I had his face cut off. DC has some concerns about what was created in the story arc. Batman uses a modified herbicide to kill Ivy's plants that are embedded in Kario.[35] releasing him from Ivy's control, then he escapes through the sewers. The name of the saga refers to the graphic novel Batman: A Death in the Family.[4] In the story arc of the aforementioned novel, Jason Todd, who at the time accompanied Batman wearing the Robinna costume, is killed by the Joker. "The Joker returns in The New 52." [56] The art of Patrick Gleason was praised for its terrifying imagery and unsettling settings.[68] The next issue was considered even better than the previous one, the highlight of this comic was the confrontation between Damian and the man he thinks is his father. [56] The story of Catwoman has a lot to do with the main plot, however it was criticized that her story was poor and in some parts absurd. She attacks uncontrollably as Dick the Joker runs away, until her body rejects the toxin that was implanted in her and she dies.
